

EXECUTIVE SESSIONS

Executive sessions may be convened by the Board, at the call of the chairman, and with the approval of the Board for discussion relating to those matters, that are allowed for, in Wyoming Statutory Law.

The motion to go into executive session shall state the purpose of the executive session, which shall be one of the areas allowed by statute. The only individuals who may attend executive sessions are Board members, the superintendent (except when his appointment or salary are under consideration), and other individuals the Board may invite to be present.

Any decision discussed and deliberated upon during an executive session shall be formally acted upon at an open meeting following the executive session.

All aspects of the operations and requirements of executive sessions will follow statutory law, including any objection to actions and discussion that were completed while the Board was in executive session.

Board members and any other person(s) attending an executive session are duty-bound not to disclose matters discussed at the executive session.
